What kind of payments has Visa launched for tokenised credit and debit cards?

- A) Contactless payments
- B) Mobile payments
- C) QR code payments
- D) Biometric payments
- E) CVV-free payments

Answer

E) CVV-free payments

Explanation

- Card payments company Visa has launched a feature that allows users to carry out online transactions without the need to punch in the Cardholder Verification Value (CVV), if the card has been tokenised.
- The CVV-free feature launched in India is aimed at making the online transaction process smoother. The merchants who adopt this will not have to ask customers for their CVV every time they do a domestic transaction. They will be verifying this three-digit number on the back of the card only once, at the time of tokenising the card.
- Tokenisation masks the card details with a unique code making transactions more secure. Such transactions are two-factor authenticated, one at the time of tokenisation and later at the time of putting the OTP.
